

Two formal entry points greet the building at two ends, that breaks through the rectangular mass. The pyramidal skylight leads you to the interior of the building, articulating a dynamic geometry.

The skylight allows for the light to come in during the day and offers a breathtaking view of the northern lights while staying indoors during the night. This being the highlight of the museum is the team's rendition of the inactive volcano mountain resting calmly under the aurora borealis.

